Magyar Liget
Reporter / Columnist
Hungary

The Magyar Liget (Hungarian Grove) cultural and family magazine aims to facilitate the unification of the Hungarian Diaspora in Scandinavia and strengthen the connection with Hungarians in the homeland as well as in the Great Hungarian Plain. Considering Hungarian identity as the key factor in reaching this goal, the articles of the magazine nurture the Hungarian language, culture and traditions. The Magyar Liget is a not for profit organization, established 1988. The work of all the writers, publishers, columnists, etc. is voluntary based. The magazine is present on the Internet with frequently refreshing content and also available in print in every year quarter.

I have a BA degree in Communication and Media from the Budapest College of Communication and Business and a master degree in Political Science and International Relations from Lund University, Sweden. I have been in connection with news and media since the college. During this time I worked as a news writer in Hungary, a reporter at the student television in Sweden as well as a columnist at a cultural and family magazine based in Lund. After graduating I moved back to Hungary to work as a freelancer in Budapest.
